On Dec 12, the 14th Annual Worldwide Candle Lighting was attended by approximately 300 at the Holiday Inn/Coco Key Resort, and together we lit the candles of hope, joy, love and memories. Everyone plays an important role to make it possible to continue to share the candle lighting with the entire community. Feedback and new ideas are appreciated, and helpful for the next program. To manage the growing cost of the annual event, we are looking into options for a new venue for 2011.

We are seeking co-chairs who are excited to begin planning the next program with the steering committee.

The steering committee submits a year-end report to the national office on March 1, and committee roles usually begin to transition between Jan 1 and Mar 1. Because of the upcoming conference, new/old committee will have an extended transition period. If you are interested in joining the committee, please ask for an application, and attend the next few steering meetings to see if the commitment is right for you. The committee meets 4-6 times a year. Chapter leaders must come from within the committee. Sandi, Kelly & Barb have about 50 years service combined and encourage new leadership and supporting roles for chapter growth as they move on to reach out to the bereavement community in other ways.

Precious Valentine Memories

The lace has grown yellow with age. The edges are tattered and the glue that held the pieces together has long dried up, leaving only a slight stain on the faded red paper. It is much smaller than I remembered. Perhaps time has caused it to shrink. It seems so fragile, resting here in my palm. The words have nearly faded and even the heavy crayon marks have lost their luster over the years. There's a smudge of unknown origin on the back, near where the paper was rubbed dangerously thin by the uncounted erasure marks. The name is barely legible, the pencil lines so weak that only the mind can read the letters. .

I found it the other day, while doing one of those winter chores: cleaning closets. It's nearly 25 degrees below zero outside and it seemed like a good idea to clear away some of the trappings of a thousand years.

February is a middle-of-winter month and most of us have fewer choices in this month than in any other. For those of us here in the Great North, it is either shovel the walk or clean the closets, and it's warmer in the closet (although not by much!) So, armed with a dust rag, trash bag and the radio, I opened the door and slipped in...not really about what I might find. I thought I was just going to clean the closet.

But, that first box sent me spinning. I found things I hadn't even remembered I'd lost! I finally found the holiday gift bought for my sister last year and then so carefully had hid away. I found snow boots and sand pails, a beach towel, three old paperbacks, a pile of magazines (all saved because I wanted to clip something "important"). I found shoelaces for shoes no longer "alive" and several other things that had once been alive.

I found a half a chocolate-covered cherry and part of a deck of cards. It was quite a treasure box, filled with junk that once had had some meaning to someone, maybe even me.

I sorted through the coats and clothes, painfully aware that "someday" would probably not arrive in my life-time. The too- short hemline and the too-small waist would not be mine again. I packed those things away, mindless of the hours and the drifting snow outside the windows.

When I found the box of scrapbooks, I sat down, now that the closet had some actual floor space. I touched the bindings, not quite sure I possessed the courage required to open the pages. The phone rang and forced me away from that decision. I left the closet and did not return until now.

That's when I found the old paper Valentine, tucked away between the pages of a life lived long ago. As I held that once sticky, but now only stained, piece of construction paper, I felt a connection with other valentines, in other lifetimes. I heard a whisper of another voice: my own mother's exclamation over my offered gift. It blended with my voice, speaking across the generations of children bringing home paper messages of love. OH! I had forgotten THAT...it had become lost in the pain of

It was a peaceful hour in that closet, listening to the sounds of my life, lived long ago and now remembered through the pages of the scrapbooks. I found my own laughter and that of my friend, joining the laughter of my own children, seeking the laughter of tomorrow's bearers of paper hearts. Time does pass on. Generations of hearts have been delivered and received. Generations of love have been shared just as generations of hurt have been endured. It felt timeless in the closet...as if when I opened the door, the give of this Valentine would still be waiting!

Perhaps that is exactly what is happening, perhaps the engineers of all of our hurts and happiness are still waiting - waiting for us to claim that love and bring their light back into being. There were so many years when I could not bear this exchanging of paper hearts! There were so many years when I counted FIRST what was missing, never realizing that in the measuring of my losses, I was truly losing what I did have.

The snow had drifted deep across the yard: only the tips of my flamingos' knit-capped, covered heads are visible in the white. But my vision has been cleared somewhat this after- noon by a visit in the closet where I found a memory that no length of time could fade. The lace is faded, the edges tattered, but the heart always remembers and though the tears, the sounds of love given and received echo back to me.

So now, this little paper message from both my past and my future sits on my dresser, reminding me each morning to make room for the happy memories as well as the hard ones.

I had "lost" that Valentine form so long ago, but the bearer of that most precious gift of love has NOT been lost to me. Our loved ones die, but the love we share between us can NEVER BE DESTROYED. Love continues past all change and becomes the memory trace that guides the human spirit. Love isn't enough, but without it, the world grows cold and frozen, and the sidewalks never get shoveled and the closets never get cleaned, and the memories get lost in the confusion of pain not healing.

Go find a Valentine, clean a closet, rummage through a drawer, search for some tangible evidence that, indeed, your love DID LIVE - and what a sweet treat that will be!

The Angels Across The USA Tour 2010 Has Arrived Home

We want to thank each and every one of you who made The Angels Across The USA Tour possible. Our journey in 2010 crossed this great country of ours several times. Thanks to your sponsorship in honor of your angels we were able to play and speak in 110 cities. We shared a message of hope and healing with thousands of hurting families who attended events large and small which was made possible because of you.

Along the journey we took every opportunity possible to share your Angels with the world. Not only did hundreds of thousands of people see our trailer decorated with decals bearing the names and hometowns of your beautiful children, grandchildren, and siblings... but those of you who submitted pictures had your angels displayed along side Alan every night as he spoke and played.

The story of the Angels Tour was featured in countless newspapers, on television and radio, so you can feel good that your Angel was seen by the world!

As we passed through some of America's greatest cities and many of its most beautiful areas, we took many pictures and videos. Here are just a few highlights of some of the places your Angels travelled to and through on this journey.

The Las Vegas Strip, The Mall of America (Bloomington, Minnesota) ,, The Precious Moments Chapel (Carthage, Missouri), The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame (Cleveland, Ohio), Daytona Speedway (Daytona Beach, Florida), Disneyland (Anaheim, California), The Professional Football Hall of Fame (Canton, Ohio), Bourbon Street (New Orleans, Louisiana), Music Row (Nashville, Tennessee), New York City, Provincetown (Cape Cod, MA), Washington, D.C., South Miami Beach (Miami, Florida), Boys Town (Omaha, Nebraska), The Alamo (San Antonio, Texas) Your Angels got a glimpse of several of the Great Lakes, saw some beautiful beaches along the Pacific Coast, Atlantic Coast, and The Gulf of Mexico. They cruised through New England in the fall, crossed the Great Plains, and saw the Lone Star State of Texas from end to end. They were right with us as we drove over, around, and through many incredible mountain ranges including the Rocky Mountains, The Smoky Mountains, and all along the Appalachian Trail.

Words can not express what an honor it was to have been able to carry your beautiful Angels with us every step of the way. Here are some fun facts about our trip. We drove nearly 45,000 miles, spending over $12,000 in fuel, slept in 168 different hotel beds, ate in over 500 different dining establishments, and spent nearly $8,000 in van and trailer repairs and upkeep.

We learned a few things about hotels. Marriott beds are the best, Motel 6 beds are the worst, free hot breakfast doesn't necessarily mean it is hot, and it is only free because no one with self-esteem would pay a dime for it. We learned that just because a shower is supposed to produce both hot and cold water that isn't always the case. We now know to ask for a room on the opposite side of the freeway, ask for a first floor room in case there is no elevator, and a "Do Not Disturb" sign on your door can be interpreted by some to read "Please knock loudly at 8 AM and wake us up."

We learned about food too. Taco Bell and Wendy's are always open late. Don't order steak at a truck stop, when a restaurant serves both Italian and Mexican food it is because they don't do either very well. Domino's delivers both hot and cold pizza. We learned that Panara Bread is always great no matter which one you go to.

Some of our best drives were when we got off the Interstate and took the two lane roads through the small towns and countryside. We learned that bad drivers are not limited to any particular region of the country, we found them everywhere. We learned that some elderly folks enjoy driving many miles on a freeway with their left blinker on with absolutely no intention of turning left.

So, after arriving home for our winter break, we must now prepare for the Angels Across The Angels Tour 2011, yes you heard me right....we are loading up the trailer and doing it all again next year as we didn't come close to getting to all the places who wanted us to speak and play for them in 2010.

You will be receiving information very soon about how you can help sponsor this new Tour. We will need the support of many of you to make it happen. We truly believe in what we are doing, and hope you will want to be a part of the 2011 Tour.

May you have a gentle holiday season, and on behalf of our tour artist Cindy Inman Davis, our lovely shipping coordinator Carmen Stewart, and both of us, we want to thank you for letting us carry your Angel(s) Across the USA in 2010.

A Dozen Roses—by Alan Pedersen

If I had a dozen roses, I know just what I'd do
I'd give each one a name that reminded me of you
The first rose I'd call sunshine, because you brighten every day
The second would be beauty, the kind that never goes away
The third rose would be priceless, like those hugs you gave to me
I'd name the fourth rose silly, oh how funny you could be
Rose five of course is patience, something you have helped me find
The sixth rose would be memories, the gift you left behind
The seventh and the eighth rose would for sure be faith and grace
Nine would be unique because no one can take your place
The tenth rose well that's easy, I'd simply name it love
Eleven would be angel, I know you're watching from above
I'd think about that twelfth rose, and I'd really take my time
After all these roses are for you my Valentine
I'm sending them to heaven in every color that I know
So twelve I'll name forever, that's how long I'll love you so
